ABSTRACT:
Child is a blessing in the family. Children are appropriately protected as well as note their rights. Negarapun in this case was reasonable guarantee and protect children's rights, civil, social, political, cultural and economic. In reality, families and even countries are not yet able to provide decent welfare for children. One of the problems that still occur is the existence of child labor. Not only violates the rights of children, with work also bring adverse effects to children both physically and psychologically. Even the impact even further, by working feared to disrupt the future of children to obtain a better life, especially children is the next generation. Children who work at an early age, usually from poor families, who are stuck in unskilled jobs with wages so bad. If you look at those things, then the child is an important asset for certain parties. This has resulted in cases of exploitation against children, either by parents or by the parties who are not responsible, in this case are business owners. Exploitation of children refers to the attitude of discriminatory or arbitrary treatment of children by family or society. Forcing children to do something for the sake of economic, social or political, without considering children's rights to protection in accordance with the development of physical, psychological and social status. The research used in this study is a qualitative method, research is used because it can understand human beings in all its complexity as subjective. Qualitative research is also an appropriate method to know how is the exploitation of children by parents who employ as laborers. Based on the results of this study indicated that the exploitation of children occurs in terms of working conditions of child workers work in places. In this case the parents become the most dominant decision makers working of children in the formal sector. Where this happens because parents are manipulating the age of the child.
