A PSYCHOLOGICAL APPROACH IN CHARACTER ANALYSIS OF IRIS MARLE IN AGATHA CHRISTIE'S NOVEL "SPARKLING CYANIDE"

MUHAMMAD ZAENUDIN, MUH. KHO LIQ, M. HUM

Professional, 2007

Gunadarma University

http://www.gunadarma.ac.id

Key Words: Psychological approach, Character, Analysis

ABSTRACT:

Novel consists of a lot of genre. Those are having different story which give us knowledge and life values because it reflected human life through its characters. Therefore, we can learn many things from those. Sparkling Cyanide is detective mystery novel which written by Agatha Christie. This novel is about a mysterious murder. The writer tried to explore Iris characterization that she has to survive from the remembrance of death. Based on the description above, the writer interested in analyzing the main characters characterizations, and psychological factors influence Iris life through psychological approach. The writer uses library research in writing this research. The novel Sparkling Cyanide was taken as the primary data and other references such as books, dictionary and internet services are taken also. The aims of this research are to find out the personality and psychological factors influence Iris Marle. After analyzing the characterization of Iris Marle, the writer concluded that Iris Marle is envious, innocent, curious, and egoistic person while psychological that influence Iris is anxiety and depression.